It’s difficult for working-aged adults and healthy seniors to imagine a time when they might need long-term care (LTC); it seems so far off.

If you or a family member needed assistance with the everyday activities of life, how would you be prepared to meet the expense of that care while maintaining the family lifestyle you’ve worked so hard to establish? Who in the family will provide the daily care, and for how long before their own commitments and responsibilities are negatively affected?

It’s important to realize that paying for LTC services is just another expense in life. The only questions are where the money will come from and what will be the impact on the family.

Long-term care is difficult enough on its own; what makes it even more difficult is a lack of planning. The topic of long-term and extended health care planning also tends to generate both questions and anxiety. Making decisions related to this important topic can be so challenging that it is easier to just put it off until another day, but therein lies the problem. Education is the solution.

Gannon University is pleased in continuing to offer a Long-Term Care Education and Planning Program, LTCEPP®, as a voluntary benefit. This program, presented in partnership with Loesel-SchAAF Insurance Agency of Erie, will provide you with education and information on the risks, costs, consequences and the impact of needing long-term and extended health care. Most importantly, options that will help you protect your most important asset – your family.

This comprehensive program will cover such topics as:

- Explanation and risks of long-term or extended health care
  - What are my options?
  - The consequences of not planning
  - The current cost of care and projected increases
  - Why address this now?
  - Is LTC insurance appropriate for my situation?
  - Plan design and affordability

Everyone deserves long-term care education and everyone needs a long-term care plan. When appropriate, selecting insurance as part of the plan should be an informed decision.

Gannon University’s LTCEPP® includes the opportunity to consider LTC insurance coverage offered on a voluntary, direct-billed basis from top carriers within the industry. This offering is available to employees and their spouses, children, siblings, parents, grandparents and in-laws.

If unable to attend, but interested in learning more about LTC planning, please contact Ed Althof of Loesel-SchAAF at 814-833-5433 or ealthof@LSinsure.com
